

KILLED WHEN CAR TIPS OVER 3 TIMES

143rd & Harlem In Orland Township Scene of Fatal Spill

The intersection of 143rd street and Harlem avenue was the scene of a fatal auto accident at 1:30 o'clock Wednesday morning when John Kucinkas, 23 years old, of 6925 South Rockwell Street, Chicago, was killed and four other persons were injured when his automobile overturned three times.

The injured persons are: Miss Helen Sands, 24 of 3121 S. May St.; Miss Louise Epkowski, 18, of 1053 W. 32nd St.; Alphonse Praisuss, 22 of 1827 S. Union Ave.; and Chester Sanok, 18 of 2947 Quinn Street.

Marley To Vote On Raise In Tax Rate To Pay Debt

A meeting was held at the Marley school house Monday evening, Aug. 7th, for the purpose of giving information to all legal voters of district 125, concerning the election which is to be held at that place Saturday, August 12th, from 4 to 7 p. m.

On account of the inclement weather not all of the voters of the district were present at the meeting.

Mr. Schroeder was present and explained that because the present levy does not provide enough money to meet the operating expense of the district, it has been found necessary to issue tax anticipation warrants from time to time until now the district has a debt of $750.00 which bears interest at six per cent. Interest is nothing more or less than a penalty that individuals or organizations pay for the privilege of being in debt, in no way lessens the debt and brings no return on the investment. So in order to pay the debt and remove the burden of interest, Mr. Schroeder explained, it will be necessary to raise the rate of taxation, as there is no legal way to raise the levy to provide more money.

Many rural districts have already done this and the election Saturday is for the purpose of allowing the voters of District 125 to decide if they wish to raise the rate, pay the present debt, and provide against the issuance of more tax anticipation warrants bearing 6 percent interest, or if they wish to remain in debt, keep getting further in debt and paying more interest each year.

It would seem that the only question is, does the district wish to vote to pay, debt and interest both, or to raise the rate, pay its debt and stop the interest, which at the present time amounts to practically $50 a year and will keep growing each year that the district is obliged to borrow money to pay its operating expenses.

Disregarding Stop Sign And Reckless Driving Wrecks 4 Automobiles

Failure to observe a stop sign and excessive speed caused two very serious auto accidents at the intersection of 159th street and Oak Park Ave. north of Tinley Park last Saturday and Sunday. Mrs. Betty Eichelberg who operates the Haf-Wa Eat Shop on the east side of Oak Park Avenue witnessed these accidents and rendered first aid.

Saturday afternoon an automobile bearing a Massachusetts license plate going south on Oak Park Ave at about 75 miles an hour crashed into an Indiana car when the driver failed to observe the stop sign. The occupants of both cars were injured and were removed to the Oak Forest Infirmary hospital by the county police. Both cars were very badly damaged.

Mokena Men In Feminine Roles At Ball Game

BY THE OFFICE BOY

Well sir, it seems I'm about in line for a better job. It came last Tuesday night and the boss says, "Sonny, you'd better cover the game at Hayden's Field tonight." So I guess that gives me the title of sport Reporter, or I mean Sports Editor.

Well, I mooched over to the ball diamond expecting to see the Firemen playing the Phillips 66 bunch as announced by me last week, but instead of the firemen I saw the dandiest array of outfits I'd ever seen out on the field. And there were some real celebrities there too. Yes sir right in Mokena was Uncle Sam in person, Mae West, only she had her hair dyed red, but her lines were all there, up on the pitchers mound. And behind the bat was Huck Finn, minus his cornucop pipe. And back of him was the umpire, an old fashioned bloomer girl. Boy she sure was cute! And you know how girls like to argue. Well the ump sure got enough arguing to last him or I mean her for awhile.

Owing to the high price of leather both teams used bushel baskets for gloves, and the way some of the balls were caught, they'd have done a lot better to use the hole over at Semmler's new house for a glove! Oh yes and Herman Schweser had whiskers on like a billy goat and the most bashful person was Rene Guindon who had on the latest thing in calico gowns, and a bright red hat that would put any jitterbug to shame.

Well sir, on the Phillips 66 side the manager was the cutest country yokel with very weak suspenders. And Fred Robinson looked like he got a couple hours off from Joliet, with his striped sweater and long underwear on.

"Mae West" did some swell pitching and when she told the boys on the Phillips side to hit the ball they did! But the firemen evidently thought that the ball diamond was a merry go round for they ran up a total of 37 runs to the Phillips 66, 22. Which almost came up to my prediction of the score in last week's paper.

I guess I won't need to give the lineup as pretty nearly all of Mokena was at the game and result: The Firemen's fund is growing larger.

C. U. LATER
P.O. Mae West is dated up until next October. Morry Larson is her secretary. Apply to him for dates after Oct. 1.

Orland Park Fire Chief Is Stricken Suddenly

Fire Chief John Helenhouse of Orland Park was stricken suddenly with a hemorrhage last Saturday while at work in his barber shop. Sunday he suffered another attack and was taken to the Silver Cross hospital in an ambulance. Dr. S. S. Leavitt, the attending physician says Mr. Helenhouse is showing signs of improvement but that he lost so much blood that a blood transfusion may be necessary.

Mr. Helenhouse has been suffering from ulcers of the stomach for sometime. Sometime ago he had similar attacks and was confined to the hospital at that time.

Mr. Helenhouse has another barber operating his shop in Orland Park until he has recovered.

WILL COUNTY'S FIRST WOMEN JURORS ACT IN CORONER'S CASE

The first all woman jury of Will County to ever act in a coroner's case, sat in judgment in the shooting of a Joliet tavern keeper. Those on the history making jury were: Mrs. Susan Chizmark, foreman, Mrs. Berntha Bluth, Mrs. Mary Waldvogel, Mrs. Clara Lusciatti, Mrs. Frances Staska and Mrs. Sophie Dolak.

Sunday afternoon about 4:30 p. m. an Illinois car and one from Iowa crashed at the same intersection. Mrs. Eichelberg heard the crash and after calling the highway police she rendered first aid to a man who had been riding with two other men in the Illinois car. He had suffered a very bad gash across the lower part of his back. The other two men were also cut and bruised.

In the Iowa car a bride and groom, her mother and two children were also injured. All were taken to the Oak Forest Infirmary hospital.

This intersection has been the scene of a number of serious and fatal accidents caused solely by the auto drivers disregarding the stop sign and driving recklessly.

W. METCALFE VETERAN GRAIN BROKER DIES

Walter Metcalfe, well known to the older Mokena residents as a former resident of Mokena, died at the age of 79 years Sunday in the home of his sister-in-law, Mrs. Jerome P. Stevens in Joliet.

Mr. Metcalfe was born in Broughton, Lincolnshire, England and came to the United States when a young man. He was employed for some time by the late Noble Jones who was a big grain operator and Rock Island station agent at the time. Later Mr. Metcalfe married Miss Emma Jones, his employer's eldest daughter.

For 49 years he was active as a cash grain broker on the Chicago Board of Trade and resided in Normal Park. He retired from active work and had lived in Joliet with his wife, for the last few months.

Until his retirement, he was the Rock Island railroad's oldest commuter.

Surviving are his widow; one son Jerome, a grandson, Jerome Walter of Chicago; and a brother and sister residing in England.

Funeral services were held Tuesday afternoon at two o'clock from the Stevens home in Joliet with burial in Mount Hope Cemetery, Chicago. The Rev. Walter H. MacPherson of the Joliet Universalist church officiated.

Mokena Women Will Pitch Fast Ball Game Tues.

By The Office Boy's Assistant

Well sir, my boss has his hands full this week, sweeping, washing windows and holding his job down as sports editor so he says, "Carlie, I heard rumors of something about the women of Mokena getting up a couple of softball teams." So Wednesday after supper I happened to pass the school grounds in Slug, the operators, China Closet and I found the rumors were correct for there was the finest looking bunch of women you could imagine, practicing baseball.

My powers of observation gave me the following list: One team was managed by Mrs. F. Hirsch, Jr., and consisted of: Mesdames, that's a word I got from the Editor, V. Shoop, L. Cappel, G. Balaz, E. Geuther, F. Rauch, pitcher, M. Millan, D. Olson, catcher, L. Marti, Richard, Fox and Guindon.

Ladies and gentlemen, in the other corner we find, Mrs. A. Buessel, manager, Mesdames A. Yunker, E. Cappel, E. Erdmann, A. Heyden, J. Shevlin, W. Geuther, A. Heyden, J. Marti, M. Cooper and the pitcher, Mrs. Haefele, Mrs. M. Mall behind the plate. Then come Mrs. M. Larson, Knowles and D. Myers.

Next Tuesday night the ring will ring and it will be a seven round bout to a decision. Referred by John Balaz.

So folks if you don't want to miss a real fight to a finish be at Hayden's Field next Tuesday evening at 7:00. This will also be a style show as to what the Mokena women are wearing in slacks, and these skirts that really aren't skirts, I've forgotten the name of them.

They expect this game to remove their fear of the men and will announce the date of a game with the winners of the Firemen's, Phillips 66 teams.

And boy. Won't that be sumethin'!

Mokena May Lose Only Ball Diamond

From present indications Mokena may lose its only ball diamond known as Hayden's Field. It is reported this property is up for sale and if sold to private parties it would mean the end of the ball field. The suggestion has been made that an effort should be made to raise enough money to buy this land for a community play ground.

MISSING FORMER MOKENA MAN IS FOUND IN ST. LOUIS

John Liess, aged 68 years, well known veteran druggist of Joliet mysteriously disappeared Monday morning of this week while presumably on his way to a Joliet bank.

Mr. Liess was born in Mokena and is the son of the late John Liess, sr., of Mokena. He is the brother of Charles Liess, who operates a filling station and lunch room at the junction of Maple and Wolf roads north of Mokena and of Mrs. Herbert Cooper also of Mokena. He also has a brother Frank in Montana and three other sisters, Mrs. Gilbert Voss of Manhattan, Mrs. Rose Reab of Nebraska and Mrs. Henry Leonhardt of Joliet.

Mr. Liess has been in poor health for some time.

J. C. Liess, son of the missing man reported to the police that his father left home at 11 o'clock Monday morning to go to a bank. He never arrived at the bank.

Leonard Schofield of Joliet said that a man answering the description of Mr. Liess appeared at the Union depot in Joliet Monday morning at 11:30 o'clock and had purchased a ticket for Chicago on the Alton railroad.

Wednesday the family of Mr. Liess received a telephone call from him that he was in St. Louis, Mo. The call was traced to a railroad station in that city and Mr. Liess was located and brought home. Mr. Liess had suffered an attack of amnesia and could not remember where he was, but did recall the number of his Joliet drug store.

U. S. Girds Caribbean Military Outposts To Guard Panama Canal and Trade Lines

New Congressional Appropriations Provide Mighty Fortresses Dominating Three Entrances to 'American Lake.'

By CLARK EVANS
(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

SAN JUAN, P. R.—On some distant day a hostile power may point its war planes at the Panama canal and give the order: "Destroy it! Even if you don't come back, smash it!"

On that same day Uncle Sam's new central American defense resources would swing into action. From strategic points in the Caribbean sea, and from the canal itself, planes would soar to meet the invader. Unless this phantom foe sneaks up from the Pacific under cover of night (an eventuality even now bothering army men) there's a good chance he can be destroyed.

Within two years the Caribbean, whose still, limpid waters were once the home of swashbuckling freebooters, will be an American lake on which a "Keep out" sign can be hung at a moment's notice.

All this defense preparation is not guesswork. In the first place the Panama canal, which this month celebrates its twenty-fifth anniversary, must be protected at all cost. It is the lifeline through which our Atlantic and Pacific fleets can shuttle to protect whatever coastline is in danger. It is the slender needle's eye through which world commerce must pass if Europe is engulfed by war. And if that happens, one of the belligerents may try to destroy it.

Vital Trade Link.

Most important, the tropical Caribbean houses some of the nation's most vital trade routes from South America, providing most of the raw materials in which there is a natural domestic deficiency. For example, we get manganese for steel fabrication from Cuban-American sources on that island. Brazil also supplies this material, meanwhile sending rubber and coffee. Nitrates pass through the Panama canal from the west coast of South America and fruits come from tropical Caribbean islands. If these trade lines can be secured, the United States will remain economically self-sufficient regardless of developments in the rest of the world.

Specific defense measures in the Caribbean and the Canal Zone are under way now as a result of special congressional appropriations just made available. At Panama, American military planes already have hangars at the Atlantic and Pacific ends. Albrook field, on the Pacific side, has received a concrete runway at a cost of $500,000 and a new air depot is to be built with $1,500,000 just appropriated. Two more fields will also be built in this vicinity, one of them on 19,000 acres leased from the Republic of Panama at Rio Hato.

Guard Three Passages.

As for Caribbean "gateways" from the Atlantic, new defense measures will amply take care of the three principal passages shown on the map. Windward passage will be guarded by naval and air bases at Guantanamo, Cuba, and from newly acquired naval anchorages across the straits in Haiti. Puerto Rico, which is being made into an "American Gibraltar" and will be the key control point of all Caribbean military operations, is to house military, naval, air, submarine and land facilities which will dominate the Mona passage.

A marine air base at St. Thomas in the Virgin Islands takes care of the Anegada passage with assistance available from Puerto Rico at a moment's notice.

The emphasis being placed on this work by the United States is shown by appointment of Adm. William D. Leahy, former chief of naval operations, as new governor of Puerto Rico effective September 1. He will work in close accord with new military and naval authorities located there since administration of Caribbean defense work was transferred from Governor's island, New York.

U. S. Friendly With Neighbors.

Of special importance to Uncle Sam is the friendship of islands which form the ring around the new American lake. Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands—St. Thomas, St. Croix and St. John—belong to the miles southwest of Panama. It is known that Japanese spying expeditions, disguised as fishing parties, have been there taking observations and soundings.

Guard Against Western Attack.

In this connection, Panama canal officers wake up nights with bearded brows as they vision enemy airplane carriers approaching under cover of night up the deserted coastline of Ecuador and Colombia, launching their planes near dawn and sending them soaring over the canal. One well-placed thousand-pound bomb could destroy a 25-year-old lock and make the canal useless.

As immediate precautions, congress has already authorized a network of strategically concealed anti-aircraft stations in the Canal Zone. From these points bombing planes that managed to get near the canal might be spotted by sound-location and searchlights and brought down.

What worries the army right now is the rainy season. Until next January, when the mud dries up, they'll have hard sledding to move heavy guns into the jungle. Meanwhile fingers are kept crossed, hoping the artillery won't be needed before then.

Uncle Sam Exploits Beavers— But the Victims Don't Mind!

Without shedding his fur coat, this busy beaver jumps from the cage and goes to work on one of Uncle Sam's forest preserves.

SEATTLE. — Throughout northwestern states this month adult beavers will be captured alive and moved to happier hunting grounds. Greater dam builders than man with his multi-million-dollar concrete structures, they've been enlisted by Uncle Sam in the campaign against floods.

August and September trapping, especially in Oregon, Washington, Idaho and Minnesota, has been an annual procedure since the day engineers discovered a big mistake in America's history. For many years the beaver and other fur-bearing animals had been trapped indiscriminately, upsetting nature's balance wheel. Sudden floods, rushing from a thousand tiny mountain streams after heavy rains and during the spring melting period, had taxed the strength of the huge concrete dams.

Federal engineers concluded that one of the best way to stop floods is at their source, which means, among other factors, that literally thousands of small dams must be built on the watersheds of the entire United States.

So a few years ago the long-suffering beaver was returned to man's good graces and is now busily at work multiplying himself and building dams in huge forest and mountain tracts. In Pennsylvania, for example, the 94 beavers planted in 1915 have grown to 19,000 and are doing an excellent job of holding back water during spring freshets.

Dams built by beavers cost nothing and require no maintenance, except that occasionally they become too enthusiastic. In the Columbia river area, for example, colonies periodically decide to build a dam on one of the irrigation canals, with the result that farmers depending on water flowing through these ditches find their crops perishing from lack of moisture. Uncle Sam, far from punishing his voluntary workmen, simply backs them off to another stream.

The dams serve a double purpose, not only checking floods but supplying "sub-irrigation" to adjoining land and filtering out silt washed down by precipitous streams.

Trapping is done carefully. Cages are either baited or set directly in the paths worn by animals as they leave the water to seek food on the shore. Each trap is visited every six hours or less to make sure the imprisoned animals do not injure themselves struggling for freedom. Then, on mule-back, by train—and sometimes by airplane—they're moved to a new locality. There's no payday in the beaver's life—he simply works for the fun of it.

NATIONAL AFFAIRS

CARTER FIELD

Friends, seeking to prevent extinction of the American whaling industry, make favorable impression in congress in their attempt to repeal the prohibitive whale oil tax . . . No hope for railroad legislation until the next session of congress . . . Local taxes the real burden the railroads are forced to shoulder.

WASHINGTON.—Advocates of repeal of a prohibitive whale oil tax, seeking to prevent the extinction of the American whaling industry, made a very favorable impression in congress, one gathers from talks with senators and representatives, so that there is the possibility that it will be a live issue next year. This may be too late for the present interested group, as without repeal of the tax they declare they cannot possibly start operations for next season.

What the whale people want to repeal is a three-cent excise tax on whale oil which is obtained from whales killed by "killer ships" flying a foreign flag. The situation is that the killer ships used by the American concern involved are Norwegian, and the gunners in every instance are Norwegian.

It is claimed that Americans will eventually become adept gunners, but there are none left of the men who once gave the American whaling industry world leadership. Their exodus began with the Civil war, when Confederate privateers drove them from the seas, and practically concluded when their wooden craft, in twos and threes and whole fleets, were caught in ice packs in the polar regions after the whales had been driven from warmer waters.

The skill of the gunner is not merely that of a marksman, it is explained. That is important, but only one of the little steps. The main art lies in figuring where a whale will come up, after he has been sighted blowing and then has dived beneath the surface. The Norwegians have become marvelously accurate in this calculation, and hence bag more whales and waste less time on the part of the killer ships than amateurs would.

Hence, it is claimed, it is impractical to use Americans for this job, until they have been trained, and it is also said to be impractical to use American flag killer ships. The tankers that bring the product back from the killer ships to port do fly the American flag, and the enterprise is owned by an American corporation.

Purpose of Tax Was to Aid the American Farmer

A little joke on the company is that when it first acquired a big tanker ship for this purpose, the United States government had a loan on the vessel. Had this loan been allowed to stand the treasury would have had a considerable interest in not having the vessel made worthless. But the loan was paid off, so Uncle Sam was lost as a partner!

The alleged purpose of the tax, which was added to the 1938 revenue bill at the last moment, was to aid the American farmer. Congressmen were given to understand that the dairy interests were for the amendment. It develops that none of the whale products compete with any edible fats. They compete chiefly with inedible fats and tallow rendered from garbage.

As domestic sources supply less than 60 per cent of domestic requirements for inedible fats, it is contended that the protection granted favors one American industry at the expense of another.

The company interested also informs congressmen that the whaling ships of all nations employ Norwegian gunners and Norwegian killer ships.

No Hope for Railroads Until the Next Session

There is no hope for the railroads until the next session of congress. In fact, the bill which the senate approved but which will continue to sleep in conference until January does not contain very much hope either. The real situation is that there is small probability of congress being willing to do anything which would be of any real help to the roads.

The curious part of all this is that both congress and President Roosevelt are really anxious to do something for the carriers. It is not a question of being against the vested interests, nor of a pet peeve. There is really no outstanding figure in public life who is crusading against the railroads. The trouble lies deeper. It lies in the fact that, having been strait-jacketed so long, by the government on the one hand and the unions on the other, the roads just began to sicken when they got up against truck and bus competition.

A distinguished Middle Western banker jolted several senators at dinner the other night by his insistence that it was rate reductions and taxes that had hit the railroads. He insisted that the volume of traffic, considering freight traffic, which is all that most of the railroads really profit on, was greater than in various boom years which could be cited, despite the huge amount of freight now carried by trucks.

He had so many statistics that he had the senators dizzy, all tending to show that the railroads had enormously increased their efficiency, but that the tremendous increase in the burden of taxes, plus the constant reductions in their rates, had gotten them down.

Real Wallop for Railroads

Comes From Local Taxation

This burden of taxes is heavy enough if only those imposed by the federal government are considered, but the real wallop comes from local taxes, state, county and city or town.

"Most small towns are strung out along the railroad tracks," said this banker. "Every time the town needs more revenue its council extends the city limits so as to take in more railroad property to tax."

The trouble is, senators point out privately, that there is no earthly way of reaching this situation. Congress can't very well pass a law which will declare that interstate carriers are not subject to local taxation! Even if such a measure were conceivable, politically, which it certainly is not, the problem then would arise, where are these towns going to get their revenue?

A small county in northwestern North Carolina gets 42 per cent of all its revenue from taxes on one line of railroad which runs through the county, end to end. It just so happens that this particular railroad—the Carolina, Clinchfield & Ohio—has been in the hands of receivers for some time and has none too good prospects. There is no attempt here to prove that this railroad is overtaxed, and that relieved of this sort of burden it could get along without being a problem child to congress. That would certainly enter a controversial field.

Continuance of Alcatraz

Certain Despite Murphy

Connecticut politics, mixed up with President Roosevelt's desire—whatever he may eventually decide to do to keep the ways greased for his own nomination for a third term—is what makes continuance of Alcatraz certain despite the eagerness of Attorney General Frank Murphy to get rid of this "American Devil's Island."

It so happens that Sen. Francis T. Maloney is up for re-election in Connecticut next year, and he is very anxious to go on being a senator. Maloney knows all about the enthusiasm for Roosevelt and the New Deal in Bridgeport and other industrial centers in the Nutmeg state, but he also knows about anti-third term sentiment in the rural sections. After weighing the pros and cons very deliberately he has decided that his own chances for re-election will be very much better if some other Democrat than Roosevelt is the presidential nominee next year. And he is more interested in his own re-election than in giving the New Dealers a chance to prove him wrong.

In his defense it should be stated that a senator who finds his own state is strong one way is apt to believe that he has read national sentiment also. Which would mean that Maloney would have to believe that as a third-term candidate Roosevelt could not be elected, whereas another Democrat might be.

Whether Maloney is right or not has nothing to do with the case. That is his judgment, which means that his influence in selecting Connecticut's delegation to the Democratic national convention will be thrown toward picking men and women who will be against Roosevelt's renomination.

But this does not fit in with present White House plans at all. Whatever the President may decide to do next June, it is certain at present that the President wants to be able to be renominated. Some think he wants this strength in order to choose the candidate to succeed him, and some think he wants four more years in the White House. But there is no doubt about the desire to have pro-Roosevelt and pro-third term delegates chosen.

Homer Cummings, All Smiles,

Now Enters the Picture

Which is where former Attorney General Homer S. Cummings enters the picture. He is still very potent politically in Connecticut. He was its national committeeman for many years, was once chairman of the national committee, up to and including the San Francisco convention, and still is reputed to hold his own county in the hollow of his hand.

Cummings has been advocating a third term for Roosevelt every time anyone would give him a chance by asking a question. Sometimes, when no one brought up the subject. It so happens that no other prominent Democratic organization leader in Connecticut has been doing this—certainly no one who has proved his ability to get delegates.

So when Homer Cummings dropped in on his old chief a few days ago he found the President most cordial—and willing to listen.

Emerging, Cummings was all smiles. He declined to discuss what he had talked to the President about. But when asked a question about the San Francisco bay prison he said: "Alcatraz will be there when Murphy and I are both in our graves." (Bell Syndicate—WNU Service.)

CHAPTER VIII—Continued

Doc Morrison had been startled, rather than shocked, by the revelation of Kay Forrest's photographic nudity. He gave ear to gossip for the sole purpose of chiding those who flayed the girl. And it was Doc Morrison who sternly advised Miss Trelane—the angular owner of Beverly's native beauty parlor—that it behooved only those who were without sin to cast stones . . . whereupon Miss Trelane, being unmistakably without sin, indulged in an orgy of stone-throwing and declared that she was doing it with Doc's approval.

At the lavish home of Jonathan Guinn, Mrs. Guinn was entertaining the Literary Circle. The good ladies had abandoned their fervid pursuit of culture in favor of a discussion of the previous night's affair.

Diana Guinn was an authoritative person, and as the wife of the town's foremost industrialist, a prominent one. It was she who propounded the question, "I wonder what that awful Henkel woman is thinking," and who then elicited applause by declaring the meeting adjourned and stating that, in spite of the lateness of the hour, she was on her way to the White Star Hotel to get a finger-wave from Sonia Henkel and at the same time to make sure that the imported beautician knew all about the goings-on of Kirk Reynolds' bride.

Diana moved through the gathering dusk with firm, positive strides. She persuaded Miss Henkel to remain open just a little while longer. She delivered herself over to Sonia's deft ministrations . . . and she commenced to talk.

Her voice was sharp, her ideas definite and her choice of words excellent. To be sure there be no misunderstanding she started at the beginning. She authenticated her statements by saying that they must be true because no less a person than Ruth Hamilton herself had spent that morning on the telephone explaining to her friends that the whole Hamilton family knew what Kay had been doing, that Miss Maynard was an artist—not merely a photographer—and that she considered the gossip unwarranted.

Through all of this recital, Miss Henkel was silent save for an occasional "Yes" or "Is that so?" But inwardly the tall, sleek brunette was smiling.

She was humming lightly as she left the beauty shop and approached Kirk's door. Somehow, this latest development seemed to bring Kirk closer to her. She knocked once, lightly, and responded to his "Come in" by pushing through the door and closing it behind her.

He was standing at the window, looking down on the Square, his back to her. She said, brightly, "Deep thinking, eh, Kirk?"

He turned. And then a look of astonishment passed over her face. She stared incredulously, then found herself overcome by merriment.

He smiled thinly. "What's so funny?"

She pointed and said, through bursts of laughter, "Those glasses! Gee, they make you look goofy."

"Haven't you ever seen eye-glasses before?"

"Yeh! But not on you." She gazed again on the horn-rimmed goggles and appeared to find them irresistibly funny. She said, "What's the matter: Can't you read the spots on the dice any more?"

"You knew I saw an oculist the other day in the Capital. And they just got here by special delivery. So why should you be surprised?"

"I'm not surprised at the glasses. Only at how you look in them."

He glanced at himself in the mirror. "Have your laugh, Kid. Maybe you're right, at that. They do change me a lot."

"Wait 'til the others see you . . ."

"I'm waiting. And I'm glad you're in a good humor."

"Why?"

"Because I've got news for you."

"So."

"Can you take it?"

"I've done pretty well so far, haven't I?"

He nodded. "Things are getting pretty hot. That scrap at Mac's Bar-B-Q last night didn't help any."

"What do you mean?"

"It's given people something more to talk about—and they were talking too much to start with." His voice became flat. "I'm on the spot."

"I know . . ." The laughter was gone from her eyes. She took his hand and pressed it. "Let's get out of this burg."

He shook his head. "No can do, Babe. But I've decided to do something else."

"What?"

His cold eyes held hers. "You ain't gonna like it. Not a bit." He paused for an instant. Then, "I'm bringing Kay Forrest into town."

"You're what?"

"I'm bringing Kay into town. That room yonder—" he jerked his head toward a door, "—opens into mine. She's moving in there."

Babe's lips were dry. "I—I don't exactly get it, Kirk."

"It's simple enough. I made a dumb play at the beginning—marrying the girl and letting her go back to the Gardens. That invited talk . . . and the people in this town ain't as sappy as I thought they were. They doped it out plenty quick."

"And so . . .?"

"So I'm going out to the Gardens tonight and fetch Kay. That's all."

Babe walked to the window. She didn't want Kirk to see her face at that moment. A few minutes since she had been so gay—so confident that her jealousy of Kay was groundless. Now everything was different. She was afraid to speak—fearful that she might say too much. Her hands were behind her back when she turned, and Kirk could not see the long pointed, crimson nails biting into the flesh.

She said, "I figure you better look out for trouble."

He reached for his hat. His eyes were the color of ice.

He said, "Remember this, Babe. I'm always ready for trouble."

They sat on the veranda: Barney and Margaret and Mrs. Hamilton and Jim Owenby, forcing conversation because they wished to be quite sure that Kay would not think they were listening. This was difficult, of course, because Kay had been called to the telephone several min-

He gave ear to gossip for the sole purpose of chiding those who flayed the girl.

utes since and her voice—low and insistent—came down to them from the landing and, try as they might, they could not avoid hearing occasional remarks: "But why . . . ?" "Yes, I know . . . but I can't . . ."

Fragments of conversation, bits of protest in a voice which was freighted with worry.

They heard Kay say, "Well, if I must . . ." and they heard her descending the stairway. Slowly.

Only Barney looked at her directly and he saw that she was nervous and worried. But before he could make up his mind whether to question her, she spoke.

"Let's take a little walk, Barney."

He rose with alacrity. "Surest thing you know. Need a wrap?"

"Never mind."

"What now, Princess?"

She traced hieroglyphics on the lawn with the toe of one tiny foot. She said, "I want you to promise me something, Barney."

"Consider it promised."

"This is serious."

"I'll put it in writing."

She placed her hand over his. "You're pretty fine—do you realize that?"

"Of course I do. I've spent my entire life being noble, virtuous and dependable. In fact, I might state that I'm a perfect example of what the well-dressed young man should be."

She shook her head. "I wish things were as simple as that."

"As me? Simple? My dear young lady . . ."

"Listen, Barney." Her voice was tight. "I want you to give me your word—"

"So you said. And I assured you . . ."

"I know. But this . . ."

"It's different. It's serious. I remember. Now, let's have it. What's eating on you?"

"Before I explain, I want you to promise that you won't do anything about it."

He grinned ruefully. "I'm becoming expert at doing nothing about things."

She looked thoughtfully at the black waters of the lagoon.

"That telephone call was from Kirk Reynolds."

"Hm-mm-mm!"

"You don't seem surprised."

"Should I be?"

She was silent for a moment. Then, "You're not going to like this, Barney."

"If by 'this' you mean Kirk, you're right."

"You must promise . . ."

"Listen, honey . . ." He dropped his arm from her shoulder and imprisoned one of her infinitesimal hands. "You're talking in circles. I've promised everything I can promise. You're worried about something. Suppose you tell Papa all about it."

"All right." She groped for words which would not cut too deeply.

"Kirk Reynolds is coming here tonight. I want you to promise that you won't be at the house when he comes."

"So! Why?"

"Because I'm afraid there might be trouble."

"Not in my own home."

"Even here."

"Nix, honey—nix. I don't play the hero and host at the same time, much as I dislike this Reynolds gent."

She said, "You might. Tonight."

"How come?"

"Because . . ." She moistened dry lips. "Because he's coming to take me back to Beverly with him."

She couldn't see Barney's face . . . for which fact the young man was grateful. It was dark under the trees, dark and still. Barney tried to speak lightly, "Am I supposed to ask questions?"

"It doesn't matter. You see, he's reserved a room at the White Star Hotel for me. A room next to his."

She felt Barney's fingers tighten over hers. He said, "I don't get it, honey."

"Kirk didn't do much explaining. He said he'd be out within an hour and told me to get ready."

"But this hotel business . . . ?"

"Can't you understand? He thinks that folks have been talking . . ."

"And that this will stop their gossip? I'm afraid your friend Mr. Reynolds isn't quite bright."

"He—he wants the town to believe I really am his wife."

"I see . . . and I'm to sit back and let you go with him?"

"Yes."

"We've talked about that so many times. You know I can't explain."

"I see . . . Second question, do you want to go with him?"

Her answer came sharply. "No!"

"Then," he said quietly, "you're not going."

"But you still don't understand. I've got to go."

"Like hell you do. Now you listen to me a few minutes, young lady. I've been playing the sap plenty long enough. I don't like it. And most particularly I don't like the idea of you living with Kirk Reynolds . . . and what's more! I'm not going to stand for it."

"Please . . . You promised."

"I don't care what I promised. That bird has been pushing you around long enough."

"But there's nothing you can do."

"No? We'll damn soon find out about that." His eyes were hot. "I'm going to have a talk with this lad. A nice, pleasant chat. I'm going to ask a few questions and tell him a few things."

"You mustn't!"

"Why not?"

"Because you promised. And because I'm asking you."

"Two lousy reasons."

"And also because I'm afraid. He's dangerous."

Barney made an impatient gesture. "Bad, bold guy, isn't he? Murdered Harvey Jackson without giving him a chance. Runs around playing big by frightening girls. Oh! he's tough, all right, but somehow, honey, I don't seem to be so terribly scared of him."

"Barney, listen. Believe me when I say that anything you do will only make things worse."

"Oh, yeah? And how could they be worse?"

"If anything happened to you . . ."

"I'm able to take care of myself."

She smiled bravely. "Barney . . . won't you do what I ask? Just this once."

He kissed her. "I'd better stay away from the house until after you've gone."

He turned and walked away. She gazed after his tall, slender figure with tear-dimmed eyes. Then she moved toward the house, trembling and frightened.

Barney walked along the edge of the lagoon. He was more disturbed than he cared to confess, even to himself. He kicked viciously at a small stone and heard it plop into the black water. He stood staring at nothing at all. He lighted a cigarette with fingers which trembled . . . and then he heard a voice at his shoulder, a pleasant, genial voice.

Jim Owenby said, "Saw your face in the matchlight, Barney. Who busted up your playhouse?"

Barney inhaled deeply, then spun his cigarette out over the water. It struck the ebon surface, spluttered hopelessly and went out. He asked, sharply, "Will you kindly put into plain English, Jim, your opinion of what sort of a prime sap I really am?"

"Sure. If it'll help." Owenby had moved closer. He was as tall as Barney, but broader and heavier.

He said, "Want to talk?"

"Hell—yes."

"Shoot."

"It's this Beverly mess. That telephone call Kay got was from Kirk Reynolds. He's on his way out here to take her back to town with him."

Jim whistled expressively. "And so . . . ?"

"He's taking her to the hotel. Wants the town to believe she's really his wife."

"And she's willing to go?"

Barney tried to be fair. "Not willing. But she says she must."

His voice was edgy. "She wants me to play the innocent bystander, Jim. Made me promise blind that I'd stay away from the house while Kirk was here."

"Will you?"

"I don't know. Gosh! I'd like to have it out with that bird . . . just once."

Jim said, grimly, "So would I. The man he killed was the best friend I had." He paused briefly. "Suppose I have a little talk with him, Barney."

"Nope. If somebody's got to meet that guy, it'll be me."

"What's Kay got against it?"

"He's got her scared pink. She seems to think he's dynamite."

Jim shook his head. "No matter what else that guy can do, he's a bear-cat on scaring women. Margaret has talked my ear off for the past two weeks begging me to keep out of it."

"I know. And look what I'm up against. Good Lord! Jim . . . suppose it was Margaret instead of Kay . . . and that she was going into town tonight with Kirk—against her wishes . . . what would you do?"

"I don't know."

"Yes you do. You'd meet him when he got here . . . Man! A fellow's got to do something."

"I know how you feel. But suppose Kay's right? Suppose there really is something behind all this that we haven't thought of?"

"Well . . . suppose there is?"

"Then for all we know we'd be throwing a nice big monkey-wrench into the machinery."

"So you're asking me to take it sitting down?"

Jim put a kindly hand on his friend's arm. "I'm not asking anything, Barney. I'm not advising anything. I don't know what the devil I'd do if I were in your place." The eyes of the larger man were grim and steady. "Meanwhile, I'm getting busy."

"Doing what?"

"Got to paddle through the Gardens. Two or three of these night

"If anything happened to you."

vistas I'm not entirely satisfied with. Promised myself I'd give 'em the once-over tonight." He selected a bateau and untied it. "Why not come along?"

Barney shook his head. "No, thanks."

"Any particular reason?"

"No. Just figure I'd like to be alone."

CHAPTER IX

"There," said Mrs. Hamilton, "you're all packed."

Kay nodded. The packing had been simple enough, a few things thrown into her suitcase, thrown in gaily as though she were going on a pleasant trip.

She had tried to smile it off. Mrs. Hamilton and Margaret had helped, as she had known they would. She had explained briefly. She begged them not to argue against her decision. She told them about Barney's promise to stay outside until after she had left with Kirk. And although Margaret did not comment specifically, she hoped that Jim Owenby would not stumble on Kirk.

A knock at the front door summoned them, but it wasn't Kirk. It was Kay's father. And her brother. Kay opened the door and said, "Oh! It's you!"

Andrew Forrest nodded, and Kay looked over his shoulder at the stalwart figure of her brother Andy. She said, "Won't you come in?" and they came in . . . and she closed the door against the chill of the April night.

She thought, "I must get them out of here before Kirk comes." She thought, with sudden fear, "I wonder if they know he's coming?" She thought, "I wonder why they're here?"

ELISHA: A LIFE OF HELPFULNESS

LESSON TEXT—II Kings 5:1-10, 14.
GOLDEN TEXT—Be ye kind one to another.—Ephesians 4:32.

"Loving kindness and tender mercies" (Ps. 103:4) are among the glorious attributes of our God, and consequently characteristic of those who love and serve Him. The world has all but forgotten these virtues, for in its brutal determination to achieve results there is only an outward veneer of courtesy and consideration which extends itself primarily to those from whom some advantage may be obtained or who are highly regarded because of their wealth or position. The poor and needy, the aged and afflicted are quickly brushed aside as unfortunate hindrances in the path of progress.

In all times God's people have been those most considerate of others. It is they who have given time and effort and means to help those in need. The life of Elisha is well characterized as a life of helpfulness. It is surprising to find how many of his miracles were for the purpose of helping others. God's servants are called to be leaders and to be preachers, but they are nonetheless called to carry on a life of helpful service. Elisha's experience with Naaman suggests how we may exercise such a ministry. Without seeking to designate verses in the text, shall we observe that we must

I. Find the One in Need.

It is not always that the one with the deepest need makes himself known. In fact, it is commonly true that those who have the greatest need and are possibly the most worthy of help keep their sorrows to themselves. Certainly it is true that those afflicted with the leprosy of sin do not often come to church. We must go out and seek them and bring them in.

One of the weaknesses of many churches today is that they go through their regular services, which may include preaching the gospel, and then they lament the fact that sinners do not come to the services to hear and be saved. Let us be reminded that it is our business to go out into the highways and the byways to find those in need. Naaman's experience illustrates how the simple word of a little slave girl was instrumental in bringing the leper in touch with the man of God. Had she failed in her responsibility, the prophet would have missed his opportunity to minister. Even the humblest believer has his important work, seeking out the lost and needy, and may thus be the means of bringing about great blessing.

II. Locate and Diagnose the Condition.

Naaman knew that he had leprosy, but he did not know that he had a blight of soul called pride. The prophet, acting under the guidance and control of God, struck right at the heart of things when he directed Naaman to crush his pride and to show his faith by obeying God's command to wash seven times in the Jordan.

The story has many important applications. Let us be sure that in our efforts to help people physically or socially, we get through to their real need, the need of Christ. Let us also be careful not to modify or change God's requirement. There is one way of salvation—through faith in Christ; there is no other remedy for sin. A man "must be born again" or "he cannot enter the kingdom of God" (see John 3:3-7). If men are too proud to go that way, they cannot be saved. Observe also that there was no respect of persons on the part of Elisha. Naaman was a great and distinguished man, ready to bestow rich gifts, but the man of God had no interest in those things. He wanted only to give God's message.

III. Apply the Remedy.

One would be quick to condemn the trained physician who, having found his patient and having given his attention to his need, made a careful and accurate diagnosis and then sent him away without applying the cure which was in his possession. As the servants of Christ the great Physician, engaged in the cure of souls, we need to be equally wise. It is commendable to engage in a discussion of the problems of needy men and women, expressing our heart interest in that need. It is desirable that we clarify our knowledge of their need and accurately understand the truth of the gospel which meets that need. However, all of these things are quite meaningless unless they result in the bringing of the gospel to bear on the lives of the unconverted.

Solitude

An hour of solitude, passed in sincere and earnest prayer or conflict with, and conquest over, a single passion or subtle bosom sin, will teach us more of thought, will more effectually awaken the faculty and form the habit of reflection than a year's study in the schools without them.—Coleridge.

To the Tinley Park Community At Large

Of course you are going to enter in as many classes as you can at the Fall Fiesta and Flower Show sponsored by the Tinley Park Garden Club on September 7th. Anyone who has tended his garden from early spring—digging and hoeing and spraying week after week—welcomes the opportunity to display his finest vegetables and flowers.

A flower show like every thing else, has its rules. Simple as they are, it is unbelievable how many blue ribbons exhibits are disqualified because a basic rule was ignored. Do your part to make the flower show a success by exhibiting but—

Don't fail to read the complete schedule. There is a class some where into which the finest products of your garden will fit.

Despite the dry weather of the past two weeks, 655 bouquets have been sent to the Flower Guild thru the generosity of Mr. Wm. Rauch, Mesdames. Rinsink, Anfield, Van Antwerp, Buchanan, Lloyd, Baldwin, Hartman, John Funk, Klepper, Marquardt, Kerhes, Rogers, Fulton, Swisher, Anderson, Bjork, Wm. Funk, Anna May Stockman, Rowden and Mager.

Edith Baldwin, Co-Chairman.

"Spirit" was the subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, August 6.

The Golden Text was, "What man knoweth the things of a man, save the spirit of man which is in him? even so the things of God knoweth no man, but the Spirit of God" (I Cor. 2:11).

Among the citations which comprised the Lesson-Sermon was the following from the Bible: "Teach me to do thy will; for thou art my God: thy spirit is good; lead me into the land of uprightness" (Psalms 143:10).

WLS Artists Will Entertain At State Fair

Television, latest wonder of radio, will be exhibited and demonstrated at the Illinois State Fair at Springfield by WLS, Chicago, the Prairie Farmer station, it was announced this week by Glenn Snyder, vice president and manager.

Television demonstrations will be conducted from special studios in the Arts Building from 10 a.m. to 10 p.m. each day of the fair, starting Saturday, August 12. Exactly the same television equipment—iconoscope cameras, transmitters and receivers—will be used by WLS as are now drawing tremendous crowds at the two World's Fairs in New York and San Francisco.

WLS will not confine its activities at the Illinois Fair to television, however. The WLS National Barn Dance will be the opening night attraction. WLS-Prairie Farmer are also conducting a tall corn contest. They will broadcast their Dinnerbell program from the fair each day, and will also entertain fair visitors at their exhibit tent.

Regular WLS entertainers will be used in many of the television demonstrations. Fair goers will be able to see the artists themselves on the stage and to see their televised images in the receivers nearby.

Those in the audience will also be called upon to step before the iconoscopes for interviews, and their friends and families will be able to see them on the television receiving screens. Each person televised will be awarded a certificate by WLS showing that he has participated in the first experimental television conducted at the State Fair.

The whole Hayloft crew will be on hand for the WLS National Barn dance broadcast from the grandstand on Saturday, August 12, the opening day. Uncle Ezra, Joe Kelly, Henry Burr, the Prairie Ramblers, and almost 100 other radio stars will be in the cast for this four and one-half hour broadcast, including the hour-long Alka-Seltzer portion on a coast-to-coast NBC network.

Many of these WLS radio stars have appeared in recent motion pictures, including Lulu Belle and Skyland Scotty, Patsy Montana, Maple City Four, the Hoosier Hotshots. The Barn Dance broadcast from the stage in front of the grandstand will start at 6:30 p.m. and continue until 11 o'clock, central standard time.

Art Page will broadcast his regular Dinnerbell program from the State Fair, giving a review of the day's happenings, judging, awards, and interviews with prize winners and judges. Musical entertainment will be provided by Rusty Gill, the Hoosier Soubusters and Christine. Dinnerbell broadcasts will be from the WLS-Prairie Farmer exhibit tent each day except Wednesday, when a special noon broadcast with several stars of the WLS National Barn Dance will be presented free in front of the grandstand.

The Prairie Farmer-WLS exhibit tent will be a meeting place for all visitors, with drinking fountains, chairs, and entertainment from time to time by WLS stars.

Many Candidates for GOP Governor

The republicans have found much in recent weeks to give them hope for victory in 1940, both in the state and in the nation. Many democrats are admitting that "it looks like a Republican landslide next year."

One of the natural results is a big field of candidates, especially for governor on the republican ticket. The editor of the Evanston News-Index, looking over the field, has this comment to make on the favorable chances of Representative Schnackenberg of Chicago.

"Today's Republican slate for governor would read as follows: Oscar Carlstrom, State Senator Earl Searcy, Richard J. Lyons, Edward Hayes, Wayland Brooks, Congressman Everett Dirksen, Rodney Brandon and State Rep. Schnackenberg. Chicago and Evanston, political experts pick Schnackenberg as the best winter book dark Horse in the political derby."

Must Increase Farm Income, Says Ford

WITH Edsel Ford in the driver's seat to turn the first furrow, the new and vastly-discussed Ford-Ferguson tractor made its world's first public appearance at the New York World's Fair in late July. Shown above are Henry Ford and Harry Ferguson, Irish inventor who developed the principles embodied in the new tractor and its unit implements, with a small model of the tractor between them.

Said Henry Ford: "I look for this tractor to accomplish two things—turn the farm deficit into a profit and reduce the expense of going on the land!" Enthusiastically seconding his father, Edsel Ford added: "The farm is one of the most vital problems now before the country. No political solution yet offered has been able to solve it. To increase farm income by increasing the cost of food in the cities is a policy no one, not even the farmer, approves. And yet every one agrees the farmer's income must be increased.

"My father and I believe that if the farmer can do what industry has done—make his profit out of economy of production and distribution—he will increase his real income without curtailing his market. We built this tractor primarily to cut the farmer's first cost and his operating cost.

"This tractor is the only one we ever made that completely takes the place of horses and mules, thus eliminating draught animals which constitute one of the farmer's heaviest costs. Four cows or six young cattle, which mean income, can be raised on the same land required to feed two farm horses that only mean expense."

Harry Ferguson said that among outstanding new features of the Ford tractor are light weight, simplicity of operation, maneuverability, fuel and oil economy, absolute safety on hillsides or difficult ground, and ability to strike any sort of obstruction without damage to implements. The new machine will do the work of eight horses and four men, he said.

The Ford-Ferguson tractor is now in production, and will be available to the public through Ford and other dealers about September 1. It is being demonstrated daily at the Ford Exposition, New York World's Fair.

A checkup of the nation's fatalities for 1938 is convincing proof that the pedestrian could materially improve that record by being careful.

Almost 40 per cent of the automobile fatalities last year were pedestrians. The automobile driver is not always to blame. The pedestrian sometimes puts the driver in a very precarious situation by "dumb" walking. In some sections of the country special campaigns and safety drives are being made to educate the pedestrian on safe conduct on our streets and highways.

Walk when you have the lights with you. Do not cross streets in the center of the block—cross at intersections. Do not jay-walk.

Harold Balaz and Richard Sippel returned Tuesday from a vacation trip in Wisconsin. They visited with the Milton Krapp family in Cable, also visited Mauston, the Eagle River and many other Wisconsin points. They had quite a thrilling experience while driving along at a fair speed when a rear wheel of their car fell off. The car was not ditched, however, and after the on their journey without any further wheel was replaced they continued mishaps.

She is a very efficient instructor. Among those present were Mrs. Miller of Joliet, a former Mokena school teacher, Miss Snure and Mrs. Albert Cappel of Mokena.

Mr. Morrison of Chicago is visiting with his daughter Mrs. Raymond McGuire and family.

Miss Adeline Semmler entertained her Sunday School class of the M. E. church at a picnic in the forest preserve at Harlem and 143rd street, Wednesday afternoon. Various games were played and a picnic lunch was enjoyed in the shelter house as well as the cheerful fires in fireplaces. Those present beside Miss Semmler were: Norma Jean Hostert, Alura Mumford, Charlotte and Joe Gee and Patty Bennet and also Mrs. Wm. Semmler, and daughter Ada and Dorothy Hall.

Mrs. John Horras and son Jimmy, daughter, Mrs. Bernard Cunne and children Robt, Mary, and twins, Joan and Jean and the former sister Loretta all of Chicago were visitors with friends in Mokena Wednesday. Mrs. Horras and Jimmy remained for several days.

NEW SWIMMING POOL OPENS IN BLUE ISLAND

Special exhibition swimming will feature the opening of the new floodlight swimming pool located at Highland and Burr Oak avenues in Blue Island on Tuesday night at 7 o'clock. The pool, one of the largest in Southern Cook county, is 120 by 150 feet with depth varying from 3 1/2 to 12 1/2 feet. There is a constant flow of water through its filtration plant assuring a complete turnover of the 368,000 gallons capacity every 24 hours. Trying out the pool are four Blue

Island high school girls: Betty Phelps, Norma Jean Schoeneck, Jean Ricks and Caryl Kruse. The adjacent bathhouse, also new, accommodates 1,000 bathers.

This Week In Washington

By Ralph E. Church

Representative, 10th Congressional District

(Representative Church, chosen as a delegate to the Interparliamentary Union Conference at Oslo, Norway, few to that city on the "Clipper" at his own expense and will make a report on the Conference upon his return.)

No one can ever point an accuser at the 76th Congress as being a group of "rubber stamps", "yes men" or "blank check writers". As the first Session comes to a close, the House of Representatives has asserted its complete independence. It has rather emphatically expressed its lack of faith in the White House foreign policy and the New Deal spending theories as the way to recovery. It has lost confidence in the Administration's program.

In the last few weeks we have witnessed a rebellion in Congress.

In a very real sense it has repudiated White House leadership. To what extent this attitude reflects the attitude of the people remains to be seen. But I think the people generally should find encouragement in the knowledge that more "economy" speeches are now being delivered in Congress than speeches for "bigger and better" appropriations. It is a "believe it or not"—the Congress is becoming economy minded!

It is another "believe it or not"—the Congress has gone so far as to refuse even so much as to consider two major recommendations made by the President. It refused to debate the so-called Spending-Lending Bill and it refused to debate the so-called Housing Bill. The House didn't defeat these measures, it said, "We will not consider them."

As to whether this "independent economy" attitude continues over into the next session opening in January, depends upon what the people say to their Representatives when they return home to repair their political fences. A Congressman is sensitive to public opinion. What he finds to be the prevailing public opinion in his District when he returns home to give an account of himself will determine, in large measure, how he will conduct himself at the next session. If the people really want their Representatives to be "independent" and to "economize", they will not only have the opportunity to tell them so, face to face, in the next few months but they will also have the opportunity to make it so when the next election rolls around. That's the vaule of a democracy.

There is nothing unusual for a Republican member of Congress to express his lack of confidence in the policies of a Democratic Administration. Nor is it unusual for a Democrat to oppose a Republican recommendation. But it is indeed unusual to have so many Democratic members of Congress not only vote with the Republicans against further spending but to make vigorous speeches on the Floor in opposition to the very policy a Democratic Administration has been following.

Are You Bothered With Rats?

In a number of counties in the state of Illinois and elsewhere, rats are proving themselves a nuisance. The best method that has been found to control rats, states Farm Adviser C. A. Hughes, is to use red squill. "Red squill is a product that will kill rodents of all kinds but is practically harmless to all other animals. This product may be purchased at drug stores. It is usually put out by scattering some meat or fish about the premises for one or two nights and on the third night putting out the meat or fish baited with red squill. The difficulty with red squill is that when one farmer uses it, the rats may disappear from his place but they will come in again from other locations.

Mr. G. C. Oderkirk of Lafayette, Indiana, has found that the best way to handle rat control campaigns is to process these baits and ship them frozen to the county where they may be sold at a very nominal cost with the bait printed up with instructions for use. These baits are used over the county at one time and effective rat control may be secured depending upon the cooperation of farmers and others who have premises in which rats may harbor.

Farm Adviser Hughes of Cook County says: "We have determined in Cook County that a rat campaign will probably be put on in October and November along with many other counties of the state. More publicity will be given to this campaign at that time, so those who may be interested should watch the papers for further announcements."

Plate Glass Mirror Redeems a Dark Corner

THE magic that can be wrought by a wisely placed mirror of plate glass is interestingly illustrated in these two before and after pictures, taken in the dining room of a modest five room house. A total of $8.55, of which $6.00 was spent on a plate glass mirror, redeemed two ugly corners which spoiled an otherwise attractive room. A hanging shelf, for which the homemaker paid $1.25, was hung above a chest just opposite the one pictured to form, with its bright pottery and brass ornaments, a charming reflection in the mirror. The green paint was removed from the chest for $4.00, the original wood finished by rubbing with oil and $3.90 more provided new handles of brass.

SANDWICHES MAINSTAYS OF SUMMER MENUS
(See Recipe Below)

'Make Mine a Ham on Rye'

Sandwiches in all their delightful variety are the mainstays of summer menus. Grilled sandwiches make a "one-dish meal" for lunch or supper; substantial sandwiches with hearty fillings make a satisfying picnic lunch; and dainty "tea sandwiches," served with a frosted beverage, are perfect for a party.

But it keeps a woman's wits working overtime to provide sandwiches that are new and different! And new and different they must be, if they're to retain the appetite appeal which makes them popular.

Success With Sandwiches.

1. Use bread that is a day old.
2. Cream the butter—don't melt it.
3. Whatever the filling, use plenty of it.
4. Keep sandwiches moist for several hours by wrapping them in wax paper or in a clean cloth wrung out of hot water.
5. Remember to use a variety in breads, as well as fillings—whole wheat, rye, graham, oatmeal, brown bread, raisin bread, nut bread and orange bread all make delicious sandwiches.
6. Use left-over sandwiches for next day's lunch or supper by "french toasting" them—merely dip the sandwiches in beaten egg, pan fry them on both sides, and serve hot with a garnish of watercress or sweet pickle.

Raisin Orange Filling for Sandwiches.

(Makes 8-10 sandwiches)

- 2 cups raisins
 - 2 teaspoons grated orange rind
 - 4 tablespoons orange juice
- Grind the raisins, add orange rind and juice and blend well. Use with white or whole wheat bread.

Banana Butter Filling.

(Makes 1 cup filling)

- 1 ripe banana
 - ½ cup peanut butter
 - ¼ cup dates (cut fine)
 - 1 teaspoon lemon juice
- Mash banana with a fork and thoroughly blend in remaining ingredients.

Mayonnaise Sandwich Loaf.

- 1 loaf bread
- 1 head lettuce
- ½ cup boned chicken
- ½ cup mayonnaise dressing
- 3 slices broiled bacon
- 1 medium sized tomato
- ¾ package cream cheese
- 1 tablespoon prepared mustard
- Ripe olives
- Celery

Remove crusts and slice a medium sized loaf of bread lengthwise in three long slices. Place crisp lettuce leaves on the slice and add a layer of boned chicken. Spread a second slice of bread with mayonnaise and place dressing side down, on the chicken. Add crisp broiled bacon and thin sliced tomatoes as the sandwich filling on this second layer. Spread tomatoes with mayonnaise dressing and top with third long slice of bread. Mix 3 to 4 packages softened cream cheese with one tablespoon prepared mustard and frost the loaf. Garnish with ripe olives and parsley. Slice as for any ordinary loaf of bread. Serve on individual plates.

Hot Peanut Butter Sandwiches.

Toast 5 slices of bread on one side only. Then spread untoasted side with ½ cup peanut butter, and then with ¼ cup chili sauce. Top with slices of bacon and broil slowly until bacon is slightly browned and crisp. Serve with gherkin pickle fans.

Sandwich Spread.

- 2 teaspoons dry mustard
- ¼ cup sugar
- ¼ teaspoon salt
- ¼ cup milk
- 2 eggs (slightly beaten)
- ¼ cup vinegar
- 2 teaspoons lemon juice
- 6 tablespoons soft butter
- 13-ounce package cream cheese
- ¼ cup pimiento (chopped)
- ¼ cup olives (chopped)
- 2 tablespoons pickle (chopped)
- 1 tablespoon green pepper (chopped)

In a double boiler place the mustard, sugar, salt and milk. Blend in eggs and vinegar, and cook, stirring constantly, until thickened. Remove from flame, and add remaining ingredients. Store in refrigerator until used.

Savory Sandwich Filling.

- 1 pound American cheese.
 - ¼ pound dried beef
 - 1 cup condensed tomato soup
- Run cheese and beef through food chopper, then moisten with the tomato soup. You will find that this filling will keep indefinitely if stored in the refrigerator.

If you're looking for suggestions for easy, inexpensive meals be sure to read this column next week. In it Eleanor Howe will give you practical tested recipes for one dish "macaroni meals"—recipes that are suitable for family menus, for camp cookery, and even for an informal buffet supper.

Of course the man in your family has very special recipe likes and dislikes. So has every other man. And, of course, they all like a big, juicy steak, apple pie à la mode, potatoes au gratin, etc. This new cook book contains over 125 recipes that men like. WORTH REMEMBERING

Brown paper moistened in vinegar will polish tins until they shine like silver.

Save all paraffin as you remove it from your preserves and jelly. A man's pipe cleaner makes an excellent device for cleaning the spout of the coffee or tea pot.

Emptying a cream whipper and bowl is wasteful unless one takes time to scrape them carefully. To prevent sugar from forming in preserves or jam, add a teaspoon of corn sirup to the contents of each pint.

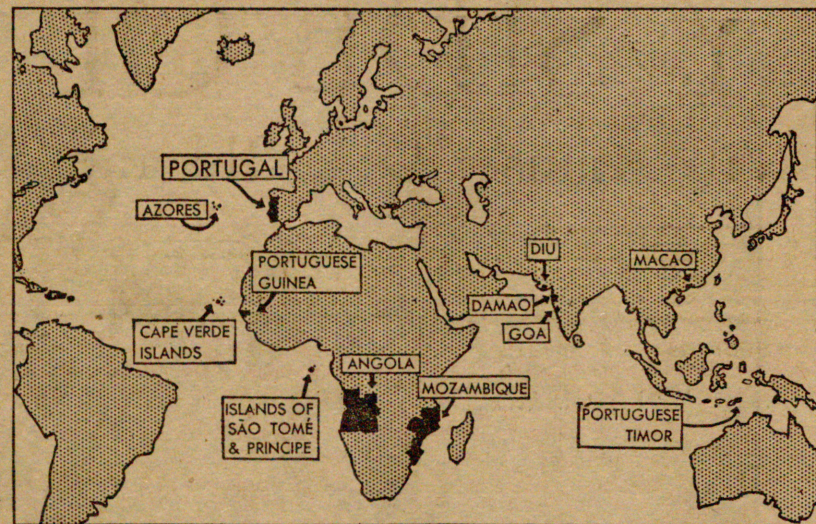

When the faucets in your bathroom need polishing take a soft cloth wet in kerosene and it will brighten them instantly without injury.

Instead of peeling whole apples, first cut them in half, then in quarters, cut out the core and then peel. This is a great time saver. Instead of peeling potatoes or scraping carrots, scrub same with a chore ball, and skins will come off easily without waste. (Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

For a Higher Effect

Interior decorators have now decided that the use of a deep color on ceilings raises them, instead of lowers, as has been usually thought. A new trick is to carry the side wall paper up onto the ceiling about 10 inches, instead of dropping the ceiling color down on the sides. This creates an optical illusion of greater height.

Portugal, Former World Power, Begins Recapture of Prestige

New Life Stirs Historic Homeland of Ancient Trade Builders.

Prepared by National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.—WNU Service.

Four centuries ago Portugal changed the map of the world by her epochal achievements in discovery. The vast wealth that poured into her treasury did much to shape the course of European affairs.

No unsupported bombast was the title assumed by the monarchs: "King, by the grace of God, of Portugal and of the Algarves, both on this side of the sea and beyond in Africa, Lord of Guinea and of Conquest, Navigation, and Commerce of Ethiopia, Arabia, Persia, and India."

Then, too, there were the Azores, Madeira, and gigantic Brazil, whose riches proved even greater and more permanent than the commerce Portugal pioneered in the Far East. But lean years came. Energetic Netherlands traders captured many of the Orient's markets; Indian monopolies vanished; Brazil waxed strong and became independent. Wars, internal confusion, and improvident rulers contributed further to her decline. During the last century Portugal has seen much of economic depression.

New National Life.

In the past 10 years, however, new life has stirred in this historic nation. Though less spectacular than sailing the seas in search of the mysteries of Africa or the wealth of the Indies, Portugal's program of rehabilitation has been scarcely less impressive.

Today new foundations have been laid in the Estado Novo, or New State. Portugal has been able to maintain a balanced budget. Ports, roads, municipal corporations, civic welfare, schools, and public enterprise have felt the quickened pulse beat of the new order. Leader of this government is Premier Antonio de Oliveira Salazar.

A few years ago roads were hardly more than marks left by the ancient, wayward wanderings of itinerant oxcarts, and were alternately deep with mud or choked with pallid dust. Now they have surfaces of gravel or stone.

Side-stepping mules and lumbering oxen are still the chief hazards to fenders in rural districts, but the motorist who blithely swerves round a corner without giving warning may hit something harder. For there are buses, and an increasing number of trucks.

Many New Highways.

Passenger vehicles now operate on more than 5,000 miles of major highways—this in a country only 350 miles long and 125 miles wide. In recent years they have carried enough people to approximate two rides yearly for each of the 7,260,000 inhabitants.

Walking, however, is by no means a lost art. Seeing women, graceful as Greek goddesses, with heavy water jars or baskets or produce perched on their heads emphasizes that fact. Most market-going peasants still ride flop-eared donkeys rather than "divers."

Although progressive innovations increase, traditional customs and Old World scenes prevail. A visit to Portugal savors of a pleasant interview with the gracious occupants of a historic family manor.

As your ship steams into the Tagus river (Tejo) at dawn, you have the feeling of moving along a hallway filled with treasured heirlooms. On your port, a slender ray of sunshine, piercing a cloud, seeks out the quaint waterside tower of Belem—half Moorish, half ornate Manueline in design—which stands as a symbol of Portugal's early ventures beyond the seas.

Golden Age Beauty.

A short distance beyond rears the dome and white stalgamic spires of the old Monastery of Jeronimos, an artistic crystallization of the country's Golden Age opulence.

There, in a tiny mariner's chapel that formerly occupied the site, Vasco da Gama and his crew said prayers the night before they hoisted sail to beat around the Cape of Good Hope and blaze the sea trail to India. There, beneath lofty arches in one of the transepts, his body now rests. Another of Portugal's heroes also shares that quiet: Luis de Camoens (Camoës) whose epic poem, The Lusads, sang of the doughty Vasco.

High on the opposite hills loomed the remains of old forts and crumbling castles, appearing like faded paintings through the morning haze. At the end of a seven-mile-long corridor the Tagus broadens into a wide marine anteroom. Greeks, Phoenicians, Romans, Moors, and visionary Crusaders, as well as hardy Portuguese navigators, have anchored their ships along its shores. Here have come rich argosies, bearing spices, silks, and porcelains from the East, and gold from Brazil.

Armada's Port of Call.

From these waters, in 1588, when Portugal was a vassal of Spain, sailed the Invincible Armada to suffer defeat by British force and raging storms. Some of the boats that ride there today, like the craft that came to the Tagus of old, have upturned Phoenician prows or the sloping lateen sail of Arab dhows.

As you swing into the lakelike estuary, a freshening breeze conspires with the mounting sun to sweep away the obscuring fog from Lisbon, as if a curtain has been suddenly drawn aside.

Lisbon, or Lisboa, as it is locally called, is the nearest continental capital to Washington, D. C. It is approximately the same size and lies at almost exactly the same parallel as our national capital. Instead of a "city of magnificent distances," however, Lisbon is a city of magnificent hills.

LEADER. Antonio de Oliveira Salazar is Portugal's present premier. He is leading the nation in its struggle to regain the prestige once possessed by Portuguese seamen.

This five-mile multihued panorama of cliff terraces rearing above the Tagus invites comparison with Naples and Istanbul. As background it lacks a Vesuvius or the spearpoints of minarets; yet it still achieves the spectacular with its bright buildings, sprawling palaces, subtropical gardens, and old fort.

Historic Sights Abound.

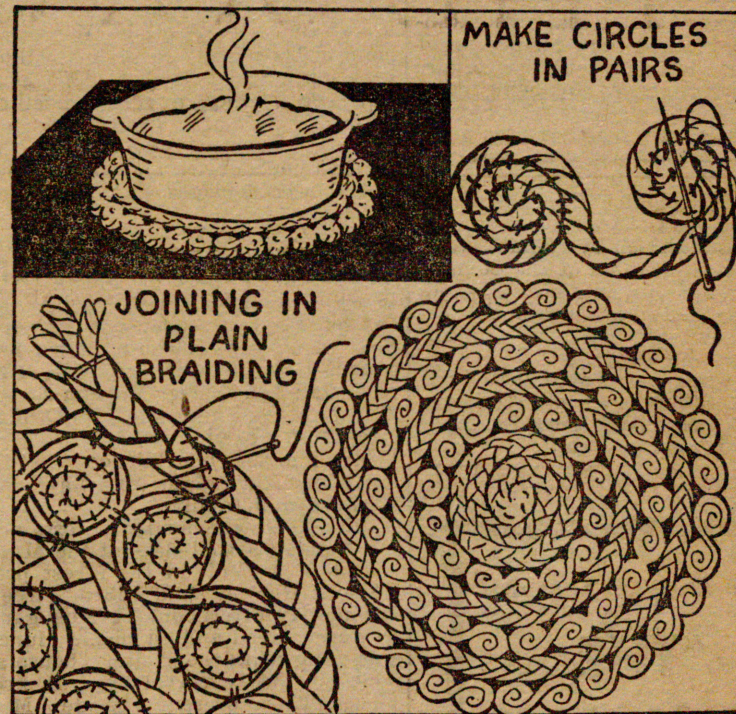

Between the somber battlements of St. George, once a Moorish stronghold, and the modern wharves more than eight centuries of visible history are spread in impressive array. Many other centuries, dating back to Phoenician and Roman occupation, have been covered by its growth.

Once ashore, we gain new perspective of the city's hills. Instead of the single curved range that appears from the harbor, there are several separate eminences. Lisbon spreads over more hills than did ancient Rome. And they are steeper. Venture away from the Praca do Commercio, the Rocio (Rossio), and the long Avenida da Liberdade, which cleaves the city in half, and one must climb.

Motorcars take circuitous routes, and even then often have to growl up in low gear. Tramways and cog-wheeled cars run everywhere, but they climb uncanny slopes and twist around unbelievable corners. On the narrow, precipitous streets men are stationed at each curve with paddles painted red on one side and green on the other to flash stop and go signals, for passing is impossible.

HOW TO SEW

by Ruth Wyeth Spears

Hot dish mats of cable cord.

SO MANY requests for copies of these directions have been received, they are being printed again to accommodate those who neglected to clip and save them when they appeared before.

The mat is made of heavy white cotton cable cord such as you buy at the notion counter for seams and trimmings.

Follow the directions in the sketch, making the circles in pairs, using No. 40 cotton thread to sew them. Braid three cords together and then sew the braided strip around and around to make the center of the mat. Sew a row of the circles to the edge of this center part; then add another braided row, being careful to "ease in" the inside edge just enough to keep the mat flat. Continue adding alternate rows of circles and braiding until the mat is size desired. To join the ends of the braided rows, pull one end through the braiding to the wrong side of the mat; then trim the ends and sew them flat.

NOTICE: Every Homemaker should have copies of the two books containing 96 How to Sew articles. You may secure SEWING, For the Home Decorator; and Gifts, Novelties and Embroideries; both for 25 cents; and your choice of the Patchwork Quilt Leaflet showing 36 authentic stitches; or the Rag Rug Leaflet FREE, while the supply lasts. Don't delay, as the offer of both books at this low price will be withdrawn soon. Send your order at once to Mrs. Spears, 210 S. Desplains St., Chicago, Ill.

AROUND THE HOUSE

Spots on Wallpaper.—Powdered starch rubbed over soiled spots on wallpaper will remove them.

Beaten Egg Whites.—Never leave egg whites after they have been beaten still. If let stand they will flatten and will not beat up again.

When Bureau Drawers Stick.—If doors or bureau drawers stick in hot weather, a little wax rubbed on the surface where friction occurs will end the trouble.

Keeping Mayonnaise.—Mayonnaise should be stored in covered jars on the upper shelf of the refrigerator, since it is likely to separate if it is kept in the coldest section.
